DENVER (April 22, 2013) – Snell & Wilmer is pleased to announce that the firm's Denver office has met its commitment to the Colorado legal profession's goal of an average of at least 50 pro bono hours of legal services per attorney in 2012. This is the second consecutive year the Denver office of Snell & Wilmer has met this goal.

"Snell & Wilmer has always been dedicated to the communities in which we serve," stated Tim O'Neill, administrative partner in Snell & Wilmer's Denver office. "Receiving this recognition is a testament to the dedication of our attorneys who understand the importance of ensuring that everyone has access to our legal system."

Rule 6.1 of the Colorado Rules of Professional Conduct states that, "Every lawyer has a professional responsibility to provide legal services to those unable to pay. A lawyer should aspire to render at least fifty hours of pro bono publico legal services per year." To meet this goal, the Denver office attorneys provided pro bono services in 2012 to the Colorado Lawyers Committee, the Boys & Girls Clubs of Metro Denver, the case of *Lobato v.
