SNELL & WILMER SUPPORTS HOUSE OF HOPE MOTHERS

SALT LAKE CITY (March 25, 2016) – Snell & Wilmer is pleased to announce that its Salt Lake City office has partnered with House of Hope to provide 59 Easter baskets to the mothers participating in its treatment programs. The baskets were assembled by Snell & Wilmer attorneys and staff and presented to House of Hope on March 25.

“Thanks to the resources of Snell & Wilmer, the mothers in our program are able to provide their children with Easter baskets this year, which is a first for many of them.” said Pat Brehl, House of Hope’s children’s services coordinator. “While House of Hope works on helping our clients provide a sober mom as a gift for their children, the thoughtful donations from Snell and Wilmer help our clients feel valued and empowered to create traditions and rituals for their family.”

House of Hope is a non-profit organization providing substance use disorder treatment, education and prevention services throughout Utah since 1946. Utilizing group, individual and family counseling and case management services, House of Hope programs help clients return to their home communities with the skills and support needed to be drug-free and self-sufficient. “Snell & Wilmer is proud of its long standing relationship with House of Hope,” said Jeremy Stewart, Snell & Wilmer attorney and member of the House of Hope Board of Trustee. “House of Hope provides such an important service in our community by helping women and children to remove themselves from often hopeless situations and to build better lives.”
