SNELL & WILMER PROMINENTLY RECOGNIZED AT THE BEUS CENTER FOR LAW AND SOCIETY — THE NEW HOME OF THE ASU SANDRA DAY O’CONNOR COLLEGE OF LAW

Arizona Center Plaza Carries Firm Name; Lobby Named After John J. Bouma

PHOENIX (August 22, 2016) – Snell & Wilmer is pleased to announce that after two years of construction, Arizona State University’s Beus Center for Law and Society, home to the Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law, officially opened its doors in downtown Phoenix on Monday, August 15 and the firm has a prominent presence throughout the campus.

The Snell & Wilmer Plaza at the Beus Center for Law and Society is prominently displayed at the entrances of the six-story, 280,000 square foot building. The lobby of the ASU Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law was named after John J. Bouma, former chairman and current partner of Snell & Wilmer and long-time contributor to the school and the community during his more than five decades as a practicing attorney. The lobby features state-of-the-art technology with large digital screens to allow students to look up their class schedules or let prospective students learn about a course of study.

“Snell & Wilmer is honored to be associated with ASU’s Beus Center for Law and Society,” said Matthew Feeney, chairman of Snell & Wilmer. “The Center was specifically designed to actively engage the public and increase its understanding of our justice system and the critical role the law plays in our lives. And as the new location for the Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law, it is where the next generation of attorneys will receive some of the finest legal training in the country. Snell & Wilmer has a long history with ASU and a number of its law school graduates proudly call Snell & Wilmer home.”
