DENVER OFFICE OF SNELL & WILMER CONTINUES EXPANSION WITH ADDITION OF ATTORNEYS C. MATTHEW ROZIER AND MATTHEW K. DONOVAN

DENVER (October 3, 2017) – Snell & Wilmer is pleased to announce the expansion of its Denver office with the addition of two attorneys. C. Matthew Rozier has joined the firm as counsel to lead the office's intellectual property practice group. In addition, Phoenix-based partner Matthew K. Donovan will now split his time between two Snell & Wilmer locations, Phoenix and Denver, to meet the increased demand for estate planning services in Colorado.

"Snell & Wilmer remains focused on enhancing its Denver presence and capabilities to meet client and market demands," said Curt Reimann, managing partner of Snell & Wilmer's Denver office. "I am very pleased with the growth our office has experienced this year due to the firm's focus on community involvement, lateral recruitment and new business development. Matt Rozier and Matt Donovan are talented, high-performing attorneys with unique practice areas. I am thrilled that they are joining our team."

Rozier concentrates his practice on complex intellectual property litigation before federal district courts and the U.S. International Trade Commission, with a particular emphasis on patent, trade secret, and trademark litigation. His practice also focuses on patent counseling, procurement, due diligence, and post-grant litigation before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. His clients range in size from the largest technology companies to early phase start-ups, and he has experience with a wide range of technologies, including computer hardware and software, medical devices, industrial equipment, consumer electronics, communication systems, multi-media processing, wireless networks, and user interfaces. Rozier is a registered patent attorney and has helped clients obtain, protect, and enforce their intellectual property assets for more than a decade.

C. Matthew Rozier

Matthew K. Donovan

Donovan has been with the Phoenix office of Snell & Wilmer since 2008 and is a partner in the firm's private client services group. His practice is concentrated in matters relating to family wealth, with an emphasis in estate planning and administration, estate and gift taxation, business transition, life insurance and charitable giving. In addition to lifetime planning, Donovan advises clients and their families in connection with post-death estate administration, will and trust contests, and estate and gift tax return preparation.

The arrival of Matt Rozier and Matt Donovan follows other recent additions to the firm's Denver office. Earlier this year, Partner Jeffrey K. Reeser and Counsel Adam A. Veltri joined Snell & Wilmer Denver as members of its environmental and natural resources practice group. Former City Attorney Scott Martinez was hired in February to head the office's new government affairs, regulatory and administrative law practice. Shortly after, the Denver office of Snell & Wilmer welcomed Joe Neguse, former executive director of the Colorado Department of Regulatory Agencies, to enhance its employment and administrative law practice. It also hired Byeongsook Seo as counsel to grow the firm's commercial litigation resources.

Snell & Wilmer has 40 attorneys based in its Denver office who are experienced across a variety of practices, including: corporate, finance, transactional, intellectual property, tech-transfer, regulatory compliance, government relations, real estate, construction, business litigation, franchising and licensing, estate planning and tax, and labor and employment services.
