SNELL & WILMER EXPANDS GOVERNMENT RELATIONS, REGULATORY AND ADMINISTRATIVE LAW PRACTICE WITH ADDITION OF CHANTELL TAYLOR

DENVER (August 1, 2018) – Snell & Wilmer is pleased to announce that Chantell Taylor has joined the Denver office as a partner in its Government Relations, Regulatory and Administrative Law practice. Her arrival continues the firm’s strategic expansion of its capabilities in the public and private sector, including political and election law.

As a key addition to this group, Taylor will advise and advocate for a wide range of clients across varied industries, including non-profit organizations, on governmental matters ranging from constitutional disputes to campaign finance compliance, affordable housing and transportation issues to cannabis legalization. In addition, due to her leadership in Colorado’s energy industry, Taylor will also manage regulatory issues arising from traditional and renewable energy development across the state.

“Chantell offers tremendous value to our clients in Colorado and nationwide, strengthening our existing capabilities and allowing us to continue to deliver high-quality results for our clients,” said Curt Reimann, managing partner of Snell & Wilmer’s Denver office. “Her impressive experience in political, regulatory and government law makes Chantell an excellent addition to Snell & Wilmer.”

Taylor comes to Snell & Wilmer with more than 15 years of experience in government and regulatory affairs, political and legislative matters. Most recently, she was Colorado and Utah Government Relations Manager for Anadarko Petroleum Corporation, a U.S.-based petroleum and natural gas exploration and production company. Prior to Anadarko, Taylor served as Senior Counsel at Hogan Lovells U.S. LLP where a significant part of her practice focused in government relations on behalf of Colorado’s energy industry, including serving as general counsel for Coloradans for Responsible Energy Development (CRED) and representing major industry operations and trade associations.

“I am thrilled to join Snell & Wilmer and its growing Government Relations, Regulatory and Administrative Law group,” said Taylor. “I look forward to building a unique practice that combines my experience in political consulting, government affairs and advocacy to advance the Denver office.”

Taylor received her J.D. from the University of Denver, Sturm College of Law in 2001. She was named among the Top Women in Energy by the Denver Business Journal in 2016 and as a Colorado Super Lawyer in 2015 for her legal work in government relations, contracts and lobbying. She is the Founding President of Women’s Energy Network Colorado, a non-profit organization that educates, attracts, retains and develops professional women working throughout the energy industry.
