SNELL & WILMER NAMED THE COLORADO LAWYERS COMMITTEE LAW FIRM OF THE YEAR

Three Attorneys Recognized as part of the Team of the Year

DENVER (June 20, 2019) – Snell & Wilmer is honored to be named the Colorado Lawyers Committee 2019 Law Firm of the Year. The announcement was made at the CLC annual awards luncheon in May.

“We are humbled to receive this recognition from the Colorado Lawyers Committee,” said Curt D. Reimann, managing partner of the Snell & Wilmer Denver office. “The CLC is responsible for bringing together lawyers who donate thousands of hours of time each year on crucial projects in areas such as children’s rights, community development and immigration. We appreciate the CLC’s efforts and are honored to be able to give back to our community in this way.”

In 2018, 14 attorneys from Snell & Wilmer’s Denver office participated in CLC projects. For one project, several attorneys volunteered for Denver Legal Night, assisting clients by providing legal information and referrals to those who do not otherwise have access to legal services. Since Legal Night began in 2006, more than 30,000 individuals have been helped.

In addition, three Snell & Wilmer attorneys, Ellie Lockwood, Byeongsook Seo, and Timothy P. Scalò, were recognized for their role on the Jail Wait Litigation Team, which was selected as the 2019 CLC Team of the Year. For the past 11 years, the Jail Wait Litigation Team has pursued litigation to assure that individuals who are presumed incompetent to stand trial are not held in jail for excessive periods of time before receiving treatment or being evaluated. After extensive negotiation, the team reached a groundbreaking settlement that will result in a significant reduction in the criminalization of the mentally ill in Colorado.
