Courtney Henson

"It's an honor to be nominated for this award and a privilege to work with a firm that has a strong commitment to community involvement, supporting our involvement alongside our professional obligations," Casson Owen stated.

Casson Owen focuses on real estate and aviation and FAA regulatory law. In 2019, she oversaw the Tucson office's Community Involvement Committee, raising thousands for local non-profits while empowering staff to make a difference in the lives of others. For her service, Casson Owen was awarded Snell & Wilmer's 2019 Community Involvement Award. In addition, she was appointed to the firm's Ethics Committee, exemplifying her high level of integrity and professionalism. She has served on the board of the Chi Omega Fraternity, Zeta Beta Chapter since 1992 and has served as its President since 2014.

"I am truly honored to be nominated for this award," Henson said. "I'm fortunate to have had so many advanced opportunities working on complex cases at this stage in my career. I'm also incredibly grateful to work for a firm that encourages me to spend time on the causes I care about and with my family."

Henson focuses her practice on complex commercial litigation, representing clients throughout the country on class actions and has worked with many of the region's most prominent businesses. Henson has served on the Board of the Autism Society of Southern Arizona since 2013 and has worked on autism advocacy issues at the state level, frequently partnering with the Arizona Center for Law in the Public Interest. She is involved with the University of Arizona College of Law, the McCormick Society and the Arizona Women Lawyers Association, where she's President-Elect and has served on its Steering Committee for seven years. Since 2015, she has served on the Siblings in Foster Care Reunion Committee, which reunites siblings living in separate foster homes.
