SNELL & WILMER'S FIRST PODCAST CALCURRENT CELEBRATES 50 EPISODES

SAN DIEGO (June 3, 2021) – Snell & Wilmer is pleased to announce CalCurrent, the firm's first podcast, has released its 50th episode. This milestone episode comes a month before the podcast's one-year anniversary on July 1.

On this special episode, podcast co-founders Steffi Gascón Hafén and Jeffrey D. Morton discuss the evolution of CalCurrent as a legal resource while providing a legal update on a recent tax court case with significance in the area of tax and intellectual property.

“At the beginning of the pandemic, CalCurrent was a way to connect with our clients and community, serving as a resource for legal updates in an unprecedented time,” said Hafén. “Now, a year later, as the community moves forward, we are excited to continue helping our listeners navigate the California legal landscape,” said Morton.

Created in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic, CalCurrent was formed with the goal of reaching out to the community using new technology streams to provide current and consistent legal information. It has become a go-to resource for the latest legal updates impacting California and beyond. Over the 50 episodes, the topics discussed focus on statewide, national and international legal issues including diversity in the workplace, the nuances of estate and tax planning, patent and trademark law, and the many legal challenges created during the COVID-19 pandemic.

CalCurrent is available on swlaw.com, Apple Podcasts, Stitcher and Spotify with new episodes being released weekly. The full back catalogue of episodes can be found here.
