Main Bio

Tony Caldwell helps clients navigate complex issues related to law and technology. His day-to-day practice focuses on corporate, technology and life sciences transactions, and contracting matters, with an emphasis on licensing, manufacturing and supply chain, clinical trials, data use, cybersecurity, and mergers and acquisitions.

Technology

Tony assists clients from early- and mid-stage startups to public companies with developing, acquiring, monetizing, and protecting rights in their intellectual property and data across a diverse range of highly regulated industries, including apparel, home builders, SaaS, software, mobile apps, pharmaceuticals, diagnostic tests, medical devices, defense, and consulting services. He has significant experience with commercial contracting and supply chain management issues for clients involved in semiconductors, microchips, electric vehicles, fiber optics, diagnostic instrumentation, batteries, and irrigation systems.

Life Sciences/Medical Devices

Tony advises biotechnology, pharmaceutical, medical device, and diagnostics companies with commercial contracting and clinical matters, and he is a member of the firm's life science and medical technology industry group. He has a comprehensive understanding of the legal needs of the life sciences industry, including its regulatory framework, risks and opportunities, rapidly changing technologies, and competitive landscape. He has extensive experience negotiating pre-clinical and clinical trial agreements, material transfer agreements, and domestic and international supply chain agreements. He has also represented several life sciences companies in connection with M&A transactions and IPOs.

Healthcare

From business associate agreements to electronic medical records compliance, Tony has extensive experience counseling healthcare providers on business and legal issues. He regularly represents various healthcare organizations, including hospitals, physician groups, pharmacists, chiropractors, surgery centers, assisted living facilities, home health agencies, clinical laboratories, and commercial insurers, as well as digital health and telehealth companies looking to innovate the healthcare industry. Prior to joining Snell & Wilmer, Tony represented one of the nation's largest nonprofit healthcare systems as deputized in-house technology counsel.

Data Privacy

Tony advises international and U.S. companies with data privacy and healthcare regulatory matters and is a member of the firm's cybersecurity, data protection and privacy practice group. He has particular experience assisting clients in cybersecurity preparedness, advising clients on potential risks and creating strategies before a cyberattack occurs, including cyber risk management programs, vendor assessment and management, privacy and information security policies, workforce training on privacy laws and best practices, and information governance. He has also represented many multinational companies in responding to cyber incidents involving ransomware and cyber extortion attacks resulting in exposure of sensitive information. He routinely assists companies with issues and drafting policies related to the EU GDPR, UK GDPR, CCPA, CPRA, TCPA, COPPA, CAN-SPAM, PIPEDA, HIPAA, and HITECH.

Licensing

Tony advises businesses on their brand awareness efforts through licensing and corporate sponsorship efforts. Tony has counseled clients regarding name, image and likeness (NIL) issues, affiliate marketing, influencer arrangements, and celebrity advertisement. He has represented his clients in a variety of professional and college sponsorship deals across golf, e-sports, football, and soccer.
