Main Bio

Jonathan Brinson represents businesses and individuals in various complex dispute resolution and litigation matters throughout the United States. Jonathan regularly works for his clients in state and federal courts, in mediation and arbitration proceedings, appeals, and in other alternative forms of dispute resolution.

In his insurance recovery practice, Jonathan works closely with clients on loss and insurance benefit recovery, and regularly works with clients' insurance brokers in providing guidance on their insurance program. He has extensive experience seeking recovery under a variety of policies, including general liability, cyber, fidelity, builders' risk, professional liability, director and officer liability, errors and omissions, crop insurance, and a wide variety of other coverages.

Jonathan routinely represents software developers in disputes over enterprise software development and claims regarding scope of performance and contractual obligations. Additionally, Jonathan represents government entities in high-stakes litigation ranging from high-profile wrongful arrest and imprisonment claims to hundreds of millions of dollars in alleged government takings. He also represents clients in CERCLA, RCRA, and other environmental matters, as well as product liability disputes.

Jonathan represents Fortune 100 and Fortune 500 companies across the country, including software companies, financial institutions, manufacturers, wholesalers, service providers, retailers, farmers, and business owners.
